

Students who withdraw from a registered course within seven calendar days from the date of registration are eligible for a full refund of tuition fees. The refund will be processed only after the student submits a formal course withdrawal request through the academic office or student portal. Registration charges and administrative processing fees, if any, may not be refundable.

If a student withdraws after seven calendar days but before the official course withdrawal deadline, the institute will refund fifty percent of the tuition fee. The refund amount will be calculated only on the tuition component and will not include examination fees, laboratory charges, or other non-academic service fees already used during the semester.

Once the course withdrawal deadline has passed, students are not eligible for any refund, even if they stop attending classes. Requests based on medical reasons or extraordinary circumstances may be reviewed separately by the academic committee, but approval is not guaranteed and depends on supporting documentation.
